OUR 76TH YEAR, NO. 20 — May 17, 1990

Opening Day

MAYOR JEAN Grace snips the ribbon to the new Vista Lobos parking lot and Carmel children Anne White and Cardiff and Taylor Schmitz ready themselves to race through from the mini-park onto the 68-space free parking lot. The site was known for years as the Handley property and Hayward Lumberyard until the city purchased it in December, 1987. The park, with its 12-foot long Douglas fir picnic table built and donated by John and Robert Kirchenbauer, was designed by Hall & Rock Landscape Planning and Architecture. Local restaurants provided food and Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers the music at the ribbon-cutting ceremony. The city conducted a contest to name the site and Vista Lobos was the winning entry submitted by Jonathan Braudrick and Shirley Winter.

Plans for new swim complex near middle school up and running

By DAVID LELAND

ORGANIZERS OF an ambitious swim complex slated for Carmel Valley have begun an offensive blitz in an effort to bring the project to fruition.

With that in mind, organizers have hired independent business consultant Andy Briant as project manager and facilitator.

"I'm getting this thing up and running," said Briant, who formerly served as vice president and general manager of the resorts services division of the Pebble Beach Co.

Indeed, the project appears to need Briant's "can-do" attitude, having effectively ground to a halt since its inception in late 1987.

"He's working very hard at bringing this to the public," said Dick Falge, long involved in the project. "We're extremely lucky to have somebody of Andy's caliber."

While original plans called for a $28 million Carmel Area Community Complex, complete with performing arts center, the newer concept is much smaller.

Current ideas indicate an outdoor swimming pool 75 feet by 50 meters and indoor pool 75 feet by 45 feet, plus offices and changing rooms.

The complex will be located on land owned by the Carmel Unified School District near Carmel Middle School.

The price tag has also become less ambitious, now standing at $6 million. Funding will be realized from private donations, with a fund-raising effort beginning by mid-July.

FORMER PEBBLE Beach vice president Andy Briant has been charged with leading the fund-raising effort for an aquatic center slated for Carmel Valley. (Mac McDonald photo.)

But while the project has changed its look, the intent has remained the same.

Says Briant, "The mission statement is to secure for our community an aquatics facility representative of, and accommodating to, the needs of the widest possible spectrum of its population in the area of healthful, life-enhancing physical activity in keeping with the balance, scope and quality of life that our area of Central Coast represents for them."

Briant has been hired for $2,000 a month, which will be paid by the Board of Directors of the Carmel Area Aquatic Center, which received an excess of $100,000 in seed money from an anonymous donor in 1981.

The board is composed of Falge, president; Merv Sutton, vice president; Sandy Sandstrum, CFO; Ted Ardell; CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise; Bruce Meyer; Marion Tavernetti; and Diane Whitesides.

Briant said there are three primary areas of concern when thinking about the project: traffic, access and water.

Regarding traffic, Briant said the project will not generate huge amounts of traffic, with the majority of it coming during off hours.

Until Rio Road is extended to run by the school property, as mandated in the Carmel Valley Master Plan, entry and exit from the facility will take place via the middle school entrance off Carmel Valley Road, Briant said.

Water to fill the pool could be initially transported in from out of state, with typical pool maintainance using less water than landscaping.

Once the project is realized, which could come as quickly as two years, the pools, designed by San Francisco architect Thornton Anderson, will serve the Barracudas swim team, area schools, Carmel Foundation and the community at large, Briant said.

Briant was not dismayed at the city of Monterey's plans to build a recreational pool.

"The two will work hand in hand," he said, adding that Monterey's facility is less competition-oriented than Carmel's.

Planners to address changes to city's R-1 ordinance once again

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will once again address the city's R-1 ordinances, including the sliding scale concept to reduce the maximum size house allowed on larger lots.

The commission will meet at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 23 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

While the commission has agreed with the sliding scale concept for lots over 4,000 square feet in the past, it has been grappling with the specifics of that scale.

At its next meeting, the planning staff will submit a plan to use a formula instead of a set scale to address the problem.

"Rather than use a table of floor area ratio for lot size, we will use a formula," said associate planner Brian Roseth.

Using a formula, he explained, takes into account lots sizes such as 5,200 square feet, not only lots like 5,000 or 6,000 square feet as the table does.

"It creates a smooth continous scale rather than something that jumps from one size to another," Roseth explained.

In other action the commission will discuss a ordinance change that will allow flexibility in house design based on special circumstances at the building site.

Those special circumstance can include such things a tree which should be saved, a feature of an existing home that is in keeping with Carmel character but violates current codes.

"Basically, it is in the character of the city that there are a lot of non-conformities and many times these contribute to that character," Roseth said.

It is aimed toward existing homes rather than new structures.

The ordinance change would recognize the individual "constraints on different sites" and permit the commission and builders to work around those conditions.

To issue the "special exception" permit, the application must meet some very strict findings or reasons to grant the permit.

The special exception may allow the house to encroach on the setbacks or height limitations, he said.

It is similar to a variance, however, a variance can only be granted to a project based on the conditions of the land, like a steep slope or drainage area.

In other business, the commission will conduct a preliminary review on whether or not to have a revocation of an increased retail floor area space granted to On the Beach earlier this year.

The commission granted permission to the business on Red Eagle Lane and Mission Street to convert about 441 square feet of storage area space into retail space last July, with a net increase of 521 square feet. The business now uses the space as a surfboard display area.

As a condition to grant the increase in floor space, the commission required that On the Beach "provide additional landscaping" in the area in front of the shop.

Roseth explained that the owner, Kelly Sorenson, has planted an area that was already dirt but the commission must decide whether the dictate was to provide additional landscaped area, not just plant an already non-paved section of the lot.

If the commission decides the business is in violation of the conditions, it can schedule a use permit revocation hearing or it can amend the use permit so there is not a violation.

Owner Sorenson was not available for comment before The Pine Cone press time.

A success story

Dear Editor:

Congratulations are in order again for another communitywide success story in creating open space for one and all to enjoy.

As with the successful completion of the Carmel Beach Walkway, the development of the Vista Lobos project has been achieved through the contributions of ideas and efforts from every corner of our community — from the design concept phase through construction.

I would like to give special acknowledgement and deep appreciation to Jim Carrol of Ocean View Lodge for his generous donation of all specimen trees planted at the site; to the Northeast Carmel Neighbors Association members for their fund-raising efforts towards financing the picnic tables in place at the site, with individual thanks to John and Robert Kirchenbauer for donating their time and materials to construct the beautiful table recently added to the park furniture layout.

My compliments and gratitude to one and all. I hope that all the citizens of Carmel-by-the-Sea will accept the city's invitation to join in the ribbon-cutting ceremony to officially open Vista Lobos on Tuesday, May 15, at 5 p.m.

Societal apathy

Dear Editor:

On Tuesday, March 13, while my pregnant sister was carrying her young son, at the Carmel Crossroads, she tripped on a rock in the road and fell to the ground.

The result was her son bumping his head, my sister bloodying her hands and knees. Understandably it took her a few minutes to regain her balance, while trying to comfort her crying child. The area was bustling with shoppers and workers, yet not one person stopped to even ask her if she was OK, much less offer their assistance to help her stand.

Is this what "society" is coming to? I am appalled that anyone could see this happen to a pregnant mother and child and be unmoved to offer their help.

For you who saw this happen: You should be ashamed, and thank God she wasn't more seriously injured; in which case your selfishness might have resulted in worsening her injuries.

'Disgraced?'

Dear Editor:

The recent removal of Ed Hicks from the Carmel Planning Commission and the manner in which it was handled by the mayor is a disgrace.

I, as a member of the Design Review Committee, was in attendance at the meeting and was never consulted on the Hicks' statement, but rather the decision was based on a phone call from an undisclosed person, a hard-to-interpret tape, and a partial staff transcript.

The tape that was provided to me differs from the transcript in that his remark to me stated "niggered," not "niggers." Had I been consulted I would have explained that the term "niggered" was a common expression used at the time Ed Hicks and I were in college to describe last-minute fussy details on a drawing. The expression came from the word "niggling," described by Webster's Dictionary to mean "excessively concerned with details, fussy," and has nothing to do with the word "nigger," referring to dark-skinned people.

This decision based on incomplete and incorrect material supplied by the staff without thorough investigation is inexusable. Consequently, an innocent remark made by Mr. Hicks has been used by persons wishing to remove him from the commission to achieve their goal, which has caused Ed and his wife Mary Ellen extensive personal damage.

Missed opportunity

Dear Editor:

The recent hassle in Salinas over replacing green grass at the court house with macadam and a large parking lot was not well handled. Much more parking around the city hall and court house was obviously needed and will increase.

The decision to tear out the green grass was painful. Green grass around public buildings during sustaining droughts should be abhorred UNLESS non-drinking or reclaimed water is used. Lawns in most any form should have the lowest priority during droughts.

Should we not expect our government agencies to set an example of the austerity of the water crisis. A lot of city land in Santa Clara County has large signs showing "Irrigated by Reclaimed Water."

Where was the politicians' water awareness displayed by the city and county decision makers in arriving at parking solutions without considering the water availability over the long term. Even with only a one-level parking area, consideration should have been given to storing water below the cement and macadam which could have been filled just from the building roofs each winter. That water could be used to further irrigate any lawns or trees, and flush all the government toilets in that complex for a full year.

I had distributed a paper back in February to both the county and city suggesting a combined water storage and auto parking facility. Two birds with one stone. Looks like our politicians again have missed a good opportunity to apply a known water management technology in favor of a quick fix, single purpose solution. Do we really understand California-type droughts?

Distant memories

Dear Editor:

It has been years since I have been in Carmel. On these rare visits I feel like a stranger. The beach is the only place where I feel that there is still something left from the past.

Money and cars and noise can't change the white and green landscape of the beach.

It is on the beach that I think back. Some of the memories are blurred. Some are so vivid I could just reach out and grab them. The days when George Rockwood owned The Village Corner. Peach ice cream, cheap coffee, and off-the-wall waitresses. Peeling the paint off the tables in the courtyard. Staying there all afternoon for a buck.

Going to the post office, and seeing 90 percent of the town. The meeting place. Picking not just the daily mail, moreover picking up the daily news. The Carmel version of leaning over the backyard fence.

Then reaching even further back there are the distant memories of The Creamery on Ocean Avenue. The movie house near by. Knapp's lumber mill on San Carlos where the air smelled of sawdust. The Craft Center across the street, where I ate chocolate while my father drank coffee and talked to the artists. Days of getting part-time work at the Rinky Dink. The fireman's fund of Carmel. All gone.

I hold these memories sacred. What was there still exists for me. What is there now, has nothing to do with these distant memories. I find it very sad that those who live in Carmel now, never had a chance to experience what it was like previously. At this point Carmel, could be Any Town USA. Its description of being an "artist's colony" no longer applies. The days of the struggling artist moving to Carmel is out of the question. The struggling artist would starve. The cost of living in Carmel is right up there with the Upper West Side in Manhattan. All this for a one time beautiful dot on the map, which drew the artists to it. From my viewpoint, what has happened to Carmel over the past 15 years is backfiring. It has entered the realm of being cute.

There is a chance that via the original locals, Carmel will reverse itself, and go back. Back to what it was that made it so special. This can only happen by the people of Carmel. No outside "help." Outside help usually spells greed. If something isn't done, just think of what you are losing. It is insanity to continue on the way you are going.

In closing, I must say that I hope that those kids who are growing up in Carmel now, will have good memories. Not memories of the destruction of a part of paradise. No memories of freeways and tour buses. That they will possess what I have. Although distant, they reassure me that I had it all once.

Barrio of elderly

Dear Editor:

To quote a lady of great intellect and reknown:

"Those interested in perpetuating present conditions are always in tears about the marvelous past that is about to disappear, without having so much as a smile for the young future."

Simone de Beauvoir

This observation is appropriate to the activities of zealots in Carmel's own version of the Flat Earth Society who support the proposed disabling ordinance on subordinate units ("granny housing"). A purported residential community is moving to eliminate residential housing particularly suitable for the young, thus Carmel will become even more of a barrio of the elderly.

Under the ordinance the existing stock of outlaw units will become legitimate when registered and brought up to health and safety standards. But then the world stops. Using a peculiar subjective cudgel, no further subordinate units will be permitted unless the city determines there is a "hardship" among the occupants. This is the only residential property in Carmel where this social/medical determination is required. Of course it is done all the time in the Soviet Socialist Republics, but then, there are no property owners to pay taxes while taking abuse.

The proposed ordinance is bad law because it will not accomplish its purported purpose. Sneak-in subordinate units will proliferate along with general disdain for the city's backward approach. City litigation costs will rise because owners of suitable property will be outraged that they do not receive equal protection of the law.

The city will institutionalize willy-nilly invasion of privacy with residential policing. The ordinance thwarts the state-enabling statute which encourages subordinate units. The ordinance is a blow to the residential community. There is no rational justification for the ordinance which in effect reduces housing stock and all but eliminates housing for the young, for teachers, clerks, nurses, policemen, single mothers, etc.

It is claimed that the ordinance was 18 months in the generative process. To come up with this odious mean-spirited product indicates huge system failure. The entire city council and staff should slink away from this ordinance. No one can be proud of perpetrating injustice. The ordinance must be amended.

San Carlos Street dirt

CARMEL PUBLIC Works Department is busy tearing up then replacing San Carlos Street from Eighth to 12th avenues. Work is scheduled for completion June 30. Residents on the street will have access to their homes and will be notified of interruptions. Detours for trucks over 12 feet 6 inches are to San Antonio to Santa Lucia to Rio Road. Planners ask owner of sloped lots to resubmit plans

By NANCY HILLS

THE MOST controversial application before the Carmel Planning Commission these days is not a commercial building or a T-shirt shop that sells ice cream and Carmel key chains.

Instead it is two homes proposed for a oak-tree dotted, 45- to 55-percent slope on the north side of 11th Avenue, one overlooking Mission Trail Park and one facing the Kinnoull Estate mansion on the other.

'We feel we are being treated unfairly and that we can't build a reasonably sized house.'

— William Probasco

The adjoining lots are 10,835 square feet and 18,532 square feet with plans for a 3,400-square-foot house submitted for the former and a 3,000-square-foot home for the latter, including garages for both.

The commission continued property owner William Probasco's design application after suggesting the architect submit new drawings.

The homes have already been scaled down from the original plans of 4,000 square feet.

"With the current ordinance, which allows 45 percent coverage, we could build a 9,000-square-foot house (on the one larger lot)," architect Al Sayoran told the commission. "We don't feel what we propose is ridiculous."

Neighbors and park supporters showed up in force to ask for smaller houses and express their dismay over what some believed is an encroachment into the park entrance. Most speakers referred to the original 4,000-square-foot designs in their protests.

"Tree removal is something we hate to see happen because it is happening all over," Lloyd Test said. "I sense an encroachment on lovely Mission Trail Park. We're going to have to move the gate. I value Carmel cottages and I hate to see these huge homes being built."

The encroachment, however, appears to be the other way around. The 11th Avenue gate into Mission Trail Park is on private property and the city has an easement for public access into the park. Probasco actually owns the property to the first bridge past the gate and the Mission Trail Park sign and map box are on his property.

Others expressed concern about fire hazards in the park, erosion due to the cuts in the hillside and drainage. One speaker suggested that the city purchase the lot beyond the park gate.

Hugo Ferlito, who owns a home that will look down on one of the houses, complimented both Probasco and Saroyan for their cooperation during the design, but added that he had concerns that more trees will die from the construction than is now projected.

According to the plannning staff report, written by assistant planner Brian Roseth, the two lots were a part of a controversial 1977 subdivision, when it was owned by the Sparolini family. That subdivision produced four lots, two of which are already developed. A lot line adjustment in 1985 produced current configuration of the two lots now up for development.

"Creation of these two lots required reviews by the plannng commission, the city council and the Coastal Commission," the report reads.

Probasco, the current property owner, is a Big Sur resident, real estate broker and builder. He bought the lots in August 1989.

"Every morning I come to Carmel and take a walk somewhere. During one of those walks, I saw these properties for sale," he said in an interview with The Pine Cone. He felt, he said, that the lots were "very, very beautiful."

He and Saroyan went to the city and discussed whether the lots were buildable before the purchase. Additionally, the current application is a redesign of the original at the request of the design review committee. That committee, which consisted of commissioners Jack Kennedy, Fred Keeble and Ed Hicks, liked that most recent submittal, Probasco said.

"Hopefully" Probasco said, he and his wife will live in one of the homes.

"We are thinking that we want to move into town," he added.

They both love Carmel, he said, and its atmosphere and would not want to build anything that would be out of keeping with its character.

TWO HOMES proposed for above the 11th Avenue Mission Trail Park gate has stirred up some of the neighborhood and people who use the park, but the gate and land up to the bridge do not belong to the city. The city has an easement for access up to the first bridge. (Nancy Hills photo.)

"My wife and I started coming here in the early 1950s," he explained, "and have owned several homes in town. We have grandchildren and we would now like to build a family home."

"We feel we are being treated unfairly and that we can't build a reasonably sized house," he said.

ARCHITECT SAROYAN explained that the houses were designed to "lay as naturally on the land" as possible and that the exterior materials were selected to blend in with the forest setting.

One house in particular is stepped down the lot and neither home has a height greater than the height of the lot. The homes were designed to save as many trees as possible, and it is actually the driveways that will necessitate removal of about half of the trees that will be removed.

"From the actual park itself, there is so much forest and bush that you won't be able to see the homes all that much," he said. "In reality, these two home will have much less of an impact and be less visibile then most of the houses that currently border the park right now."

Saroyan said that part of the problem is that people believe that section of land where the gate and the road is located is part of the park when it is actually private property.

"In the neighbors' mind's eye, they view the easement as part of the park," he said.

The Probasco's property actually goes to the first bridge past the gate, Saroyan said.

"I think the planning commission should be looking at the quality of the design, not just the size of the house," he said.

"The bottom line is that we want to do a good project and build good homes," Saroyan said.

Supes rip Highlands advisory committee over its input

By DAVID LELAND

COUNTY SUPERVISORS this week read the riot act to members of the Highlands-Bixby Advisory Committee for their input into a residential project.

At least one supervisor went as far as to question any future recommendations put forth by the volunteer committee, which reviews building for that area.

'In the future, I will take a jaundiced look at any recommendations made by this advisory committee.'

— Barbara Shipnuck

This recommendation has "undermined the credibility of that advisory committee," said 1st District Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck.

Members of the committee were not present at the hearing in Salinas.

Before the board was an appeal of a building permit approved for a 2,851-square-foot, single-family home on Boyd Way in Carmel Highlands.

Two times the applicant, James McGregor, had brought plans before the committee — both times they received a thumbs-down.

The rub for supervisors, however, was that the second time the plans were revised, as mandated by the advisory committee, five small oak trees were targeted for removal.

Both Shipnuck and 2nd District Supervisor Marc Del Piero found fault with the committee not recognizing that the county has strict policies against the felling of oak trees.

"In the future, I will take a jaundiced look at any recommendations made by this advisory committee," Shipnuck said.

Both supervisors said they chose not to amend current, approved plans because it would present a hardship to the applicant in the form of time and money.

The appeal, lodged by Boyd Way resident William Madden, seemed doomed from the onset, as Madden insinuated during public testimony that several Monterey County Planning Commissioners did not act with straight-forward integrity.

Third District Supervisor Dusan Petrovic told Madden that the board could never side with him and run the risk of calling county officials dishonest.

Madden said that he only meant that one commissioner, who is a real estate agent, should have disqualified herself from the hearing because another real estate agent owned the land.

Shipnuck then asked Madden what he would do if a farmer sat on the board and another farmer requested an agricultural use on his land?

Madden said the farmer should disqualify himself.

During the one-hour, often-confusing hearing, five Carmel Highlands residents testified for the appellant.

Supervisors then unanimously overturned the appeal, upholding a December planning commission ruling.

Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas said he has grown weary of the convoluted process facing some applicants.

"The American Dream when you buy a lot and build a house is not true anymore," he said. "(Instead), you buy a house and build it to the way your neighbors want it — I'm getting very concerned about that."

Other supervisors, however, did not share Karas' opinion of the public planning process.

Proposed legislation could delay any decision to close Fort Ord

By DAVID LELAND

AN OPTIMISTIC Rep. Leon Panetta told reporters last week that proposed legislation could delay any decision on the closing of Fort Ord for up to five years.

Fort Ord was one of a number of military bases slated for closure earlier this year by the Pentagon, in a scenario calling for the 7th Infantry Division to be relocated to Fort Lewis in Washington state.

"(First) you have to make a decision about where you are going," said Panetta, referring to projected U.S. troop reductions worldwide. "I'm working on legislation to put the (Fort Ord closing) recommendation on hold."

Panetta said it will be three to five years before the Pentagon decides how and where its troops will be deployed.

Panetta said the Fort Ord Task Force was well received by the powers-that-be in the nation's capital during three days of meetings earlier in the month.

"I was very proud of the work of the task force," said Panetta, referring to meetings with U.S. Army officials, various appropriations committees and the Armed Services Committee. "The Pentagon has not done the equivalent (amount of work); the task force is well ahead of the game."

Panetta said one Army official indicated to him that the task force's presentation was the most complete report of its kind that he had heard.

'(First) you have to make a decision about where you are going. I'm working on legislation to put the (Fort Ord closing) recommendation on hold.'

— Rep. Leon Panetta

Instead of concentrating on the obvious economic repercussions of the closure of Fort Ord, Panetta said the task force centered its presentation on defense issues and the cost of relocation.

The 7th Infantry, which recently was involved in the invasion of Panama by U.S.

'Dancin' at Sunset Theater

CARMEL HIGH School presents an evening of dance titled "Dancin' " at Sunset Theater in Carmel on Saturday and Sunday, May 19-20. Joining the Carmel High School performing group will be students from Pacific Grove High and special guest performer David Bryant. Choreographer Walter White will present a number danced by students from Monterey Peninsula College. Styles of dance will include jazz, ballet and modern. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 for adults and $2 for students.

Rationing ordinance on water agenda

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District board will conduct a second reading of an ordinance to change the rationing regulations and penalties.

The district board will meet at 7 p.m. Monday, May 21 in Monterey City Council Chambers.

The board will also hold a brief memorial for director Bob Russell and will determine how to choose a replacement for him. Options include an appointment by the board or a special election.

The board is expected to keep rationing at 20 percent, but it will drop a provision that allows automatic variances for businesses to use an averaged ration for their business type. Instead, they will have to reduce their water use by 20 percent from last year or apply for a variance and prove they have taken all "reasonable" steps to reduce water use.

Residences will continue to get the automatic ration if they cannot reduce water use by 20 percent, but the board will set a maximum on the amount of water that can be used even if the home has reduced use by 20 percent. That limit is about 800 gallons per day.

The automatic ration for those who cannot reduce by 20 percent is about 80 gallons a day per person with more for a single resident in a home and less for apartments.

The board will also receive a response from the Monterey Peninsula Golf Course Association about golf course water rationing goals.

Funeral services set for Peter Stocker

FUNERAL SERVICES were held in San Francisco this week for Peter Stocker, an owner of Rancho San Carlos, who died there Saturday night in a helicopter crash.

A resident of Sausalito, Stocker, 47, was pronounced dead at the Carmel Valley scene of the explosive crash, which spared the life of the helicopter's pilot, Sydney Hendricks.

"Peter was an insightful man and had great vision as to what could happen," said Judith Brown, also a partner in Pacific Union's $70 million acquisition of the 22,000-acre spread overlooking Carmel Valley.

Brown said details of the mishap are sketchy, but that Stocker and Hendricks had flown over the property numerous times before in Hendrick's five-person helicopter.

The crash occurred shortly after takeoff at 6:10 p.m. when the helicopter hit a power line and burst into flames.

Hendricks was taken to a hospital but was later released, Brown said.

Brown added that it is unclear who will take over the helm of Pacific Union Co., which Stocker helped found 15 years ago.

Stocker is survived by his wife and four children.

Encroaching 'Carmelization' tops discussion by valley landowners

By SUSAN BECK

THE "CARMELIZATION" of Carmel Valley is a problem that will be with the community more and more, according to Max Chaplin, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA).

Presiding over last Wednesday's CVPOA meeting at the Mid Valley Fire Station, Chaplin said, "You can see the writing on the wall. Basically, it's a design standards issue." Discussion on the subject concluded that there is a definite need for an amendment to the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The master plan does not have adequate measures for visual compatability, he said. The community needs to get involved and set standards that reflect what they want in the valley. However, to add an amendment to the master plan requires a community consensus first, which is extraordinarily difficult, added Roger Williams.

Patricia Bernardi said that individuals don't like to have their personal taste legislated, but setting standards for a property's footprint, such as lot coverage or structural height, would be a way to create more compatiblity between new and existing structures.

Chaplin went on to say that the real problem is "enforceability" once an amendment is approved. Bernardi, Williams, and Jim Flippen volunteered to be on a special ad hoc committee to investigate the issue.

Another big problem for Carmel Valley is traffic, reported Rod Mills, and now that the regional park district has voted to go ahead with their Cooper Ranch development plans, traffic will be increasing even more. The plan includes moving the district headquarters to the ranch, providing a home for the historical society, creating an Indian village in Garland Park, and providing a mountain bike area in eastern Garland Park.

To alleviate future traffic congestion the possibility of improved passing and left- and right-turn lanes rather than a previous idea of extending four-lanes further on Carmel Valley Road was discussed. Mills said that perhaps the best use of the new tax money being collected for alternative traffic measures would be to, "improve safety rather than speeding up traffic for a few more miles."

Roads, not traffic, are part of the continuing problem with Saddle Mountain Ranch, said Sandy Sandstrum. The roads are apparently being graded without permits. That, along with the unapproved number of sites, a buried fuel tank, and additional lighting brought up a question from Peter Salmonsen, "What's going on at Saddle Mountain? The side of the mountain is lit up like a space station with high-intensity flood lights."

The CVPOA had requested to be included in an inspection of the ranch by the planning department. No one from CVPOA was asked to participte, and the issues were not resolved. Action was taken by a team of county inspectors who visited the site and sent a letter of their findings to the owner. Those findings are not available to the CVPOA at this time.

"The response of the planning department is short of satisfactory," said Chaplin, and generates " a lack of confidence."

Bob Greenwood brought up the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's (MPWMD) immediate need for a new board director. Anyone may apply for the position, and applications will be accepted at the district meeting on May 21.

forces, has a sterling reputation in military circles.

"The 7th Infantry has met or exceeded every mission," said Meurer, adding that Fort Lewis is not designed to accommodate the families of the soldiers.

The task force report indicates that there are 6,300 family housing units at Fort Ord, while only 3,500 at Fort Lewis.

Moreover, the cost of cleaning up hazardous waste at Fort Ord could total as much as $357 million, according to the report.

Construction at Fort Lewis to accommodate an influx of troops from Fort Ord could cost as much as $123 million, Panetta said.

IN THE event that Panetta's legislation does not pass, scoping sessions led by the Department of Defense will take place at Fort Ord sometime this summer.

Its decision will be included as a recommendation in the budget for the 1993 fiscal year, Panetta said.

In truth, Panetta said that, as long as the 7th Infantry Division is not being disbanded, it simply makes no sense to move forward with plans to close Fort Ord.

Asked Panetta, "If it isn't broken, why are we trying to fix it?"

Nostalgia

New administrator aims to inject new life into CV youth center

By SUSAN BECK

IF YOU'VE lived on the Monterey Peninsula for several years and still don't know much about the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center, you're not alone.

The intentional or unintentional secrecy of the center's existence, however, will be a thing of the past, said Kathleen Ebright Tarp, the youth center's new administrative coordinator.

"The center has come a long way in 40 years, but we want the next 40 to be even better. The board of directors are from all walks of life in the community and are dedicated to making the youth center take off," said Tarp.

The position of administrative coordinator is new to Tarp, but the youth center is not. She got involved quite naturally because her two children spend a lot of time there. She also participated in many of the center's activities and work parties. Her previous experience as co-founder and chief executive officer of Quality Demonstrations, Inc., one of the largest food product demonstration agency in Northern California, eventually lead to her to being invited to become a board member.

She has big plans for center

In addition to being a capable businesswoman, she has a deep love for entertainment. She spent four of her earlier years as the lead singer and choreographer for the Serendipity Singers, who performed throughout the United States and Canada. When the center's administrative position became available, Tarp seemed like the perfect candidate.

The position requires a person to run the center like a small business. Tarp enthusiastically accepted. "I want to get more people in the community involved. It's so much fun, bringing happiness to other people."

One of her priorities is to add more entertainment programs to the center's agenda. Some of her ideas for the future include a youth music in the park series with picnics for the families and acting classes for kids.

The center, located on Ford Road just off Carmel Valley Road near the Carmel Valley Village, was established in 1951 as a nonprofit organization. An old house on the sunny seven-acre property was converted into the main office with rooms for meetings and classes.

Another large building holds a pool table, piano, arts and craft room and a kitchen. The center's rooms are available for rent by private and public groups for meetings and activities for as little as $10 an hour.

The center also has a horseshoe pit area, volleyball court, sand lot with swings for tots, monkey bars, slides, and a very old fire engine, which was donated to the center by the Carmel Valley Fire Department, a near-Olympic size outdoor swimming pool, and a barbecue pit.

The community is invited to use the center, and about 100 parents and children do on any given day. It's not necessary to be a member, but the $25 a year family membership fee does allow for discounts on all of the center's activities and rentals of the facilities, said Tarp.

The new administrator's future plans also include getting more teenagers and middle school kids involved with the center's activities.

"Kids are sort of isolated out here. I would love to get dances going for them. I plan to talk with the kids to see what they want. The center is a wonderful place in a special setting, and it's silly not to take advantage of it," she said.

Activities available now are recreational swimming from noon to 4 p.m. and swim workouts for kids 6 through 18 with the Barracudas, the oldest swim club in Monterey County. Also, there is a three-hour scuba diving course set for Saturday, May 12, June 16, and July 21.

The center's Day Camp will start weekdays, beginning June 25 through Aug. 17 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. In conjuction with Day Camp, the center will offer a Before and After Camp Child Care Program. The program offers child care from 7:30 a.m. until Day Camp starts and will continue until 6 p.m. after camp ends. The fees are $50 for members and $52.50 for non-members per week. Coordinated swim lessons will also be available during Day Camp for those kids who want to participate.

Tarp loves her new job and living in Carmel Valley. She likes being right in the middle of things, and working at the center is like a dream come true.

"It's wonderful. I plan to be here for the rest of my life. It's the perfect place to live. It's just incredible," she said. "I've been all over the world in the entertainment business, but this is the best. We are in the country, but we have cultural activities going on all the time. We are living the American dream."

Supervisors relax restrictions on Pebble Beach Co.

COUNTY SUPERVISORS this week relaxed restrictions on the Pebble Beach Co. governing its building within the Del Monte Forest.

Since December, when illegal work took place at Spanish Bay, the county has barred the company from applying for any type of building permit in the forest.

Under this week's ruling, Pebble Beach Co. may apply for building permits as soon as restoration work at the resort is bonded or underway, except permits concerning Spanish Bay.

Supervisors will decided the fate of Spanish Bay at a hearing scheduled for July 17.

The current state of affairs is a far cry from threats made by the board last December to yank Pebble Beach Co.'s Spanish Bay permit, which could have effectively stopped golf operations at the resort.

At that time, the company violated conditions of its permits by removing vegetation, placing fill and creating tees on the 3rd, 15th and 18th holes at Spanish Bay.

Wetland areas were also filled in and vegetation removed.

After two hearings, angry supervisors directed the company to hire a dune ecologist to provide an independent, third party to review plans and supervise work.

At this week's hearing, the board received a report by coastal biologist Tom Moss, who reviewed the work and made various recommendations.

Essentially, the company is faced with restoring the land to its natural state, which will take between two and three months.

Work also entails the establishment of an additional 43,200-square-foot riparian area on the golf course, and restoration of about one acre of dune habitat on the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

The latter condition is to compensate for the interim loss of habitat values.

La Playa no shrinking violet now when touting its gardens

By DAVID LELAND

IT MAY seem hard to believe, but La Playa Hotel gardeners are only now receiving public recognition, almost 100 years after the delightful gardens first came into existence.

Witness the special beautification award granted by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club to the hotel last week for its half-acre of colorful gardens

'We've been kind of shy in the past about the garden," says Sara Henderson, head gardner. "We were dedicated to doing a good job and we didn't want it critiqued. This year is the first year that we felt confident enough to seek public merit."

Henderson credits improved planting techniques, spraying and color coordination for the garden's current pristine state.

That's not to say the hotel's grounds haven't always been beautiful, it's just now they have come of age, so to speak.

Joining Henderson in her chores are Wendy Smythe, Rafael Valasquez and Danny Moises, who care for roughly 100 different species of plants.

"It's a formal garden, but it's comfortable to be in," says Smythe. "To me it's warm and inviting."

In addition to La Playa, the crew tends to landscaping at Cottages by the Sea and a single-family dwelling on the south side of the hotel.

All three properties are owned by the Cope family in San Francisco, who purchased the properties in 1983.

Shortly after buying the property, the Copes closed down the hotel for nearly a year to carry out a $5 million renovation, part of which entailed adding courtyards and further landscaping.

The Copes, along with La Playa management, basically give the gardening crew a free rein.

"They usually come with compliments," says Sara, who began work at the hotel under previous owner Bud Allen. "They don't have too much criticism."

What's to find fault with?

Lush green lawns merge into colorful flowers, with stately courtyards providing the ideal atmosphere for enjoying the scenery.

Says General Manager Tom Glidden, "Sara and the crew love this place and it's fairly obvious by the passion by which they take care of it."

Glidden adds that 90 percent of customers eating Sunday brunch at the hotel venture down to the garden for a photo session before they leave.

The grounds have also served as subject of numerous painters, who set up their easels in the garden and go to work.

•

THE CREW takes advantage of the extensive gardening library in the greenhouse, as well as relying on expert consultants and taking field trips to keep fresh concepts coming.

"We are constantly trying out new plants and ideas to see how they work," says Smythe, adding that the crew also keeps a daily log to refer back to in years to come.

It wasn't always this organized.

"We do a lot of planning these days, we're not as impulsive as we used to be," says Henderson. "We used to go just pick out pretty flowers at the nursery."

She adds that the crew is fighting drought conditions by slowly installing a drip-irrigation system to lessen the use of water.

Also, the crew uses annual plants, which tend to need more water, only along borders of flower beds, with perennials taking up the majority of the space.

"We're decreasing the percentage of high-water use plants," says Henderson, adding that perennials occupy about 50 percent of the garden's flowers.

Perhaps no one is more appreciative of the colorful gardens than those who toil five days a week to make them perfect.

Says Henderson, "It's peaceful and serene with lots of energy, like a rainbow after a springtime shower."

SARA HENDERSON (left), and Wendy Smythe, here joined by La Playa general manager Tom Glidden, are two of the four-person team that tends to the hotel's award-winning gardens.

Dedicated

THE BARNET J. Segal Building was dedicated May 11 in ceremonies at Monterey Institute of International Studies. The building was designed by architect Boris Jacoubowski and the project manager was Jim Wood, who have been praised for integrating the new library wing with the existing administration building. Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Berman, trustees for the Segal Charitable Trust that funded the $1.3 million project, Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, and MIIS president Dr. Robert Gard spoke at the brief ceremony. A portrait of "Barney" Segal was hung in the entryway of the building.

Travel plans?

PLANNING TO travel outside the U.S.?

If you are planning to travel outside the U.S., you should check your insurance policy that covers your medical expenses. Whether you are under or over 65 makes no difference.

If you are under age 65 and covered by an individual or group plan, check to see if you are covered and under what circumstances. If you are over 65, you are probably covered in most cases under Medicare but Medicare does not cover you outside the U.S. except if you are in Mexico or Canada and then only with certain restrictions. You must be near the border.

Medicare Supplements or Medigap policies may or may not cover you outside the U.S. and then only with limited coverage. There are travel insurance plans that may be purchased through your travel agent and these should also be reviewed with caution.

I just recently had a young man call me to find out if his father (who became ill on a ship cruising near South America) was covered for medical expenses and specifically for airlift.

Apparently his father needed special lab work done which the ship could not provide and the only place it could be done was in the U.S. He had Medicare which would not help him. The cost of the airlift is around $30,000. This type of medical expense can be purchased under a special policy offered through a special company.

Probably under normal circumstances if you are traveling by land in Europe I would not be too concerned about these special policies. I might be if I were in the Middle East or South America.

Many tour programs provide medical insurance but the coverage varies from tour to tour. Check with your travel agent. You might also try California State Automobile Association.

If you have good coverage under your medical plan, don't duplicate it by buying a travel insurance policy!

The Mets took a 7-3 win over the Tigers on May 12. Jeremy Byrd was the winning pitcher; Evi Plata, with 7 K's in 3 innings, picked up the save. The duo were top hitters as well: Byrd hit 2-for-4 and doubled, while Plata went 3-for-3. Ben Thompson (M) and Casey Christensen (T) tripled.

MAJOR SOFTBALL: Coach Pat Stadille is back to regale us with tales of his team's victories. The Clambox "Gas House Gang" started the season with a big 10-8 win over the Marina Stealers. Illona "Dizzy" Simon pitched a 3-hitter for her first win, while Mika "Muscles" Dokes (2-run triple), and Megan "Gator" Martine (RBI double), paced the Gang's offensive machine. Victoria "Lefty" Phillips came on in the 7th to slam the door and pick up a save.

The Clambox crushed the Monterey Cardinals May 11. Megan Martine led the Gang with a mammoth grand slam and a 2-run homer; she was 5-for-5 in the game. More power came from Jennifer Dickman (4-for-4, triple, 4 runs), Veronica "Captain" Kirk-Clausen (3-for-3, 3 RBI) and Malia "Hac" Seltzer (2-for-2, 4 runs). "Dizzy" Simon picked up another win, while Kealoha "Ducky" Seltzer recorded her first save.

MINOR SOFTBALL: The Phillies lost a close contest May 11. Jamie Dorey fueled a last-inning rally, driving in three runs with a powerful triple, but Carmel was still a run short in the game won 11-10 by Monterey Kiwanis. Shelby Wilson, Allison Dougherty, Thaya Saxby and Erin Miller also contributed hits; the Phillies played a good game overall.

Achilles in Carmel

IT'S TRUE! It is illegal to wear high heels in Carmel. I had heard the rumor; now I can confirm the existence of a municipal code section prohibiting the wearing of shoes with heels "more than 2 inches high and less than 1 square inch of bearing surface."

The code calls attention to Carmel's urban forest and informal lighting, street surfaces, etc., all of which, it says, involve greater risk to those wearing high-heeled shoes "more adaptable to city life."

There is a way out: you can get a permit from the city clerk. I asked city clerk Jeanne Brehner if she had ever issued such a permit. Her surprising answer: "Oh yes, several!" Then she added, "But perhaps not for the use for which they were intended." Meaning? Some residents and some tourists have acquired permits for wearing high heels — as souvenirs.

A FRIEND in need is a friend indeed. Never more true than when it's the Friends of Sunset Foundation. Recently I had an opportunity to see — and tread softly upon — the new carpeting on the stairs, top landing and bottom hall behind the stage at Sunset Center, all provided as the foundation's "maiden effort" to support the center's capital improvements.

Lequita Watkins, chairperson of the projects committee for the Friends, worked with Sunset Center staff to select materials and coordinate the project.

EFFECTS OF the October earthquake continue to be experienced, even here in this more fortunate area. A friend who called a plumber to repair a leak, with water seeping down the wall of her Carmel Valley home, was told that this was just one of a series of similar problems he had encountered recently. The problem is that the quake shook pipes just enough to cause a slight separation at the joints, and therefore, a leak.

The Stonehouse Guest Lodge in Carmel found chimney damage, also attributed to the quake. But this was rock and mortar shaken loose from an old, unused chimney. The main, functional chimney had been inspected and was found to be in good condition.

EVENTS OF special interest for seniors, coming up: the Salinas Red Cross presents classes for caregivers, the next to begin in early June, in Seaside. This could be especially helpful for couples; whoever needs to care for someone will learn how to do it, and the person being cared for will learn how to be a cooperative patient.

On May 23 (next Wednesday), there will be a Senior Faire. This year it's a picnic at Toro Park, with entertainment, educational displays, fun and games as well as barbecue and other food. It's a special occasion — the 25th anniversary of the Older Americans Act. Co-hosts: the Area Agency on Aging and the Alliance on Aging.

SPLENDID SENIOR

Splendid seniors come in various shapes and sizes. Some are splendid because of their exceptional community service, some because they continue to do what they have done professionally or creatively, and do it even better because of age and experience. Then there are some who are splendid because...well, because of their approach to life and to aging.

Take diminutive Margo Toy. "I've always been a try-er; I try to do everything correctly." "I was born knowing how to spell, but I will still look things up." "I want what I write to flow." Refusing to tell me her exact age, she said, "Age doesn't have anything to do with anything. If you keep your mind active, you'll be o.k. I've stayed busy. And my mother, who died at 94, had been active until she was 92."

Margo also said that she learns something new at Community Hospital every day. It is there that she writes words that "flow" — as editor of the in-house monthly Capsules, an informational and often inspirational bulletin for active volunteers. She puts in from 17 to 20 hours a month on this project. One of the "something new" things she learned was to use the computer. "I thoroughly enjoyed learning that," she said, "it even tells me when it is time to go home."

Capsules comes together from Margo's perusing of the minutes of various auxiliary meetings, and from notes left in her folder by the auxiliary president and others. "I never know what I'm going to have," she said, obviously relishing that surprise element. What her more than 300 readers look forward to each month are notices about special events and awards, requests for one thing or another, gentle reminders about rules and regulations, reports on the activities of the junior volunteers, and a calendar. Lately there have also been brain teasers — "noodle doodles," as Margo calls them. These, and the new words that she comes up with from time to time, testify to her hobby of solving crossword puzzles.

Although Margo insists that she has never done anything like this before, the seeds seem to have been sown in much of her past experience. She attended a convent school in Hollywood where writing, composition and spelling were "double-stressed." As early as the sixth-grade she was writing love stories that made her classmates laugh ("even though I didn't know anything about the subject!"). She worked in the publicity department of Columbia Studios, where she learned to tell a story in a few words while she captioned mail, working from movie scripts. Even then it was important to her to keep that "flow" going.

Married to an army officer, she traveled all over the United States and abroad, spending six years in Japan. After her husband's retirement, Margo combined professional work and volunteer activity, fulfilling needs wherever she saw them: publicity for the American Red Cross, a variety of roles in the CHOMP Auxiliary from 1962 to the present (supervisor and helper on the reception desk, office worker, director-at-large, coordinator for training, head of the library service, secretary of the Central Coast Council), in the course of which she amassed more than 13,500 hours. One of the things she has enjoyed the most has been attending conventions. Her eyes sparkle when she says, "I always learn a lot at conventions."

In 1963 she was hit by an automobile and spent four months in the hospital which she had just begun to serve as a volunteer. The same philosophy that governs her work spurred her recovery: "I have always known that you have to keep your mind working." She did, and after a long fight, she returned to the full life she was building for herself here.

Margo Toy's husband, Joe, died five years ago. Now she lives at Del Mesa, where she says, "I let myself waste time — knitting, crocheting, doing puzzles." She also enjoys visits to and from her daughter and two grandchildren in Novato. And each month she produces Capsules. According to current auxiliary president Joyce Schnal: "Thank goodness for Margo. She always makes me sound great. We couldn't get along without her. She's literate and lovely."

For Margo, Capsules is a labor of love. "I like to keep it short and sweet," she said. Come to think of it, that's a good description of the editor of Capsules.

Hospice & Hermes

THE VIEW was spectacular. The ocean waves were slightly turbulent and the wind downright chilly as Friends of Hospice and Hermes of San Francisco joined fund-raising and designer talents Friday evening. The excitement had been building for weeks.

Four men in tuxedos (sparked with Hermes accessories), greeted guests as they stepped from their autos amidst cypress trees that are thousands of years old. The handsome guests were Merv Sutton, his son Jeff, Brent Threadgill and Jack Kirchner.

The melodies of Richard LaSalle greeted guests as they walked toward the carved entrance to the residence of Mrs. Maggie Eastwood. A house that is smack-dab on the rockbound coastline of the Pacific Ocean in Pebble Beach.

A house that took seven years of planning with architect George Brook-Kothlow plus a few more years to construct. The "feel" of the house is that the trees and ocean are part of the house. Almost as though they are inside with you and at the same time a feeling that you are outside with them.

This home is artistically aligned with the huge boulders and ancient cypress trees. The windows and irregular walls follow nature's design and become "one" with nature. (If you cupped your ear you could — almost — hear the soft strains of Misty.)

Cheri Threadgill, manager of Hermes in San Francisco, brought the elegance of Paris fashions for informal modeling during the buffet. Anne Anka couldn't fulfill her modeling duties due to the out-of-town graduation of one of her daughters. However, the hostess, her cover-girl-model daughter Alison, Karen LeVett, Susan Henderson, Anne Germain and Jo Ann Lombardo walked casully about inside and out so that all guests could catch a glimpse of the haute couture. Hermes is always innovative, elegant, classic. The finest fabrics and artisanship possible are used in soft refreshing colors.

The pool table held cheese and fruits designed by David Beckwith to look inviting beneath the soft light of the Tiffany lamp hanging above. Underneath a beautiful oil painting by Mrs. Eastwood, desserts filled the dining room table. Art by other masters were nearby. A commissioned piece by Emile Norman was installed near the sitting room fireplace.

Mussels, shrimp, Chinese egg rolls, roast beef, sausages, strawberries dipped in light and dark chocolates, and liquid refreshments were offered in tents near the front entrance.

San Francisco socialites failed to appear; the special guest of honor was nowhere in sight; "W" didn't show up; the gent from Italy, who phoned me for tickets, had last-minute urgent business in London, he couldn't bring his disappointed wife, and Alison's father, Clint, was attending the Cannes Film Festival.

A number of local ticketholders stayed home in front of their own fireplaces. Nevertheless, the cocktail buffet planned by Mary May Altenburg and for which Maggie Eastwood generously offered her residence, was a huge success for Hospice. The Friends of Hospice and friends of The Friends came out for an exciting social evening. Friends president Audrey Schrader returned early from a European cruise and Dolores Johnson chose to celebrate her birthday at the event.

The coffers of Hospice of the Central Coast will receive $10,000 to continue vitally needed services.

Two important announcements regarding the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art were made Saturday evening at the Sheraton Hotel. What better occasion than "The Black and White Ball" where everyone was dressed to the nines and in a happy mood.

Jo Farb Hernandez, museum director, announced that the Justin Dart Collection of Armin Hansen paintings has been given to the museum by Mrs. Dart. Secondly, Charles Moore (internationally famous architect), will design an addition to La Mirada (the historic Monterey house that belongs to the museum).

The predominance of black and white added a strong note of sophistication to an evening billed as "Puttin On The Ritz." The inspiration for the Black and White Ball came as a result of the museum's current exhibit "Monterey Collects: Black and White."

Almost everyone came attired in black, or white, or a combination. Of course it was easy for the men. As guests sipped champagne on the Sheraton mezzanine, they placed bids on black and white items found on the silent auction table, arranged by Polly Kenaston, who couldn't attend. Paintings, painted hats, scarves, photographs, prints, and drawings, etc.

The entrance leading to the San Carlos Ballroom was a black-and-white checkered walkway with white twinkling lights. Black and White balloons reached upwards above top hats with white gloves draped casually over them from the center of each table. Bright red carnations jutted out as the accent color. Ruby red dancing slippers glittered nearby.

MPMA board president Mrs. John Totten thanked ball chairpersons, Mrs. Robert Robertson and Dory Urcis, for their outstanding work and the committee that assisted them. Dancing followed a four-course dinner.

What could be more fun for Mom on her day than meeting Joan Fontaine and seeing her classic movie Rebecca? A lot of mothers received that gift and attended the reception and screening at the Dream Theater.

DICK AND Betty Ghent stopped model Susan Henderson to admire her Hermes dress and hat. (Philip Neswitz photos.)

It's hard to realize that Rebecca is celebrating its 50th anniversary. Ms. Fontaine, who played the title role, was honored on Mother's Day with a reception at the Dream Theater and was completely surprised when Salvation Army Corps Officer, Capt. Randall Y. Kinnamon read the following letter from The White House:

"Dear Miss Fontaine: word has reached me that you are being honored by the Salvation Army for your dedication to humanitarian causes and I want to commend you for your efforts.

"Our nation's greatest resource is the generosity of our people. Because we can depend on citizens like you to carry on the tradition of neighbor helping neighbor, we face the future with confidence that we can build an even kinder, gentler, America. Thank you for giving that special touch that is beyond the power of government to give.

"Barbara joins me in sending best wishes to you as you continue to be a force for good in our country. Sincerely, George Bush."

At the ceremony before the screening, Patrick Franklin presented a bouquet to Ms. Fontaine and called her "not only a treasure but one of us."

Mrs. Randall Kinnamon's large bouquet of red roses was given to Ms. Fontaine in honor of Mother's Day.

John Harris and Alan Weber, Dream Theater owners, donated the screening of Rebecca and acquired a poster and four still photos from the movie. Ms. Fontaine autographed them and they were auctioned, with proceeds going to The Salvation Army.

Rebecca will play at the Dream Theater for one week beginning tomorrow and will be shown nationally for the next two months.

"If Yan can do it, anybody can," stated Martin Yan with a broad smile during his cooking demonstration at the Monterey Sheraton.

As we had sat waiting beforehand we were thinking of his television cooking show Yan Can Cook. He entered relaxed with a glass of wine in his hand to greet some 250 guests. (He jokingly said they were mostly relatives.)

Martin Yan chopped, designed apple birds, chopped some more, sliced fresh veggies and fruit both vertically and horizontally into paper thin slivers and cooked in two woks. All were done with speed, dexterity and humor.

Afterwards, he autographed his latest book, A Wok For All Seasons and sold his cutting knives. I'm going to check fingers in the future to find out how many purchasers will succeed in keeping fingers clear of the sharp blade.

Kiwanis Club of Carmel-by-the-Sea arranged Martin Yan's engagement. Preceeding the demo, Far Eastern cuisine samplings were offered by Chef Lee, China Gourmet, Chinese Village, Golden Buddha, and Hamaichi. Schieffeli Somerset Wines furnished the beverages.

Sponsors for the event were KXDC Radio, MPTV Cable

CRA SPONSORS EKLHORN SLOUGH EXPEDITION

On Thursday, May 17, at 2 p.m., CRA members will assemble at the Elkhorn Slough Sanctuary Visitors' Center to go on a two-mile guided walk seeing the great blue heron nesting high in the pine trees, the egrets and many other flora and fauna. The cost is $2.25, payable at the visitors' center. Wear comfortable walking shoes, warm clothes, and bring binoculars if possible.

Directions: Go north on Highway 1 to Moss Landing. Turn right on Dolan Road just prior to the big 300-foot towers. Proceed inland three miles; turn left on Elkhorn Road (there's a sign), and go two miles. You'll see the gate on the left.

Return directions: Turn right from Elkhorn Road onto Dolan Road and go about one-half-mile to Castroville Blvd; turn left and this will take you back to 156 and Highway 1. Don't try to go back via Moss Landing — it could be dangerous turning left onto Highway 1.

If you want to carpool, need a ride, or can give someone a ride, gather at Torres Street Park, (now called Vista Lobos Park), Third and Torres at 1 p.m.

"TO A SAFER PLACE" DOCUMENTARY SET FOR MAY 18

The Monterey Rape Crisis Center in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College Health Services will present a showing of To A Safer Place, a ground breaking documentary about survival of incest, Friday, May 18 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in Lecture Forum 103 at Monterey Peninsula College. Admission is free.

Because of the sensitive topic of this film, the presentation will include a discussion lead by local therapist Rory McEwen. The intent of this program is to create awareness with the public about the dynamics and consequences of child sexual abuse, as well as to provide avenues and resources for survivors to help themselves.

To A Safer Place, is a 52-minute long, award-winning film produced by the National Film Board of Canada, which reveals some of the prevailing attitudes that perpetuate violence against women, men and children. It shows that the deep emotional wounds inflicted on victims of incest can be healed, and encourages survivors to break through silence and betrayal to recover and develop a sense of self-worth and dignity.

The Monterey Rape Crisis Center is a non-profit, United Way agency dedicated to helping survivors of sexual assault. Its services include private therapy sessions, a support group for teenagers and adult survivors of rape, and a support group for survivors of child abuse.

For more information call 373-3955.

ILLEGAL DRUGS

"Drugs are behind, or contribute to, most of the crimes committed in Monterey County; that's why waging a war on drugs will be my top priority as your sheriff.

My plan is to form a single drug-task-force, directed by the Sheriff and made up of one to five officers from every police department in the county. Its sole purpose will be to erradicate illegal drug activity in Monterey County.

By taking advantage of the drug asset seizure laws, it is possible to generate enough revenue to finance the drug-task-force, as well as, a drug education program in our schools."

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

Drivers and other volunteers are needed to deliver 200 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 200 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 22 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to make sandwiches and salads at the Meals On Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

Almost all of the help is from volunteers, Poland said, so often the agency ends up shorthanded. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Mother's Day

Carmel Pine Cone
May 20, 1982

Last week I saw a cartoon which showed a harassed mother being embraced by a florist, a jeweler and Ma Bell as they shouted "Happy Mother's Day."

Once a year Americans offically honor mothers as they mouth every cliche about the glories of Motherhood. It would be humorous if mothers were not so tragically neglected for the rest of the year.

Twice a year Carmel Rotary Club, which has been called a bastion of male chauvinism, honors Rotary Anns. However, every day of the year should be Mother's Day and a day to honor Rotary Anns.

Wall-to-wall carpets, clever gadgets and gimmicks make a model house but it needs a good woman to make a model home. Wives and mothers make it click.

On Mother's Day, like Greeks bearing gifts, we trot out the "three C's "candy, cards and carnations, together with the fourth "C," a hidden contract to go on working for the other 364 days without complaint, recognition or thanks. Nothing is more irritating than to be taken for granted. We do just that until a wife or mother does the one really selfish and harsh thing in her life — she dies and leaves us.

So within the dubious shadow of Mother's Day, Carmel Rotary humors all wives and mothers. We place upon their worried brows the golden halo they have worn in days of bright joy and dark sorrow. We accompany this with a surprise verging on the miraculous. We go on public record stating that we do appreciate you and thank you for being you. With gratitude we place you in the gentle hands of the Good Shepherd and His Mother Mary. Firmly we emblazon on your escutcheon with a four letter word, L-O-V-E, "love!"

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

How do you feel about flying on an airliner commanded by an older pilot? The Federal Aviation Administration insists that airline pilots must retire at age 60. Pilots seeking to continue to fly cite the performances of older pilots, such as Captain David Cronin. It was Cronin who safely flew his Boeing 747 airliner back to Hawaii with two engines lost at 20,000 feet and the fuselage ripped wide open. He did that one month before facing retirement on his 60th birthday.

People who pass up Social Security checks when they turn 65 because they continue to work may still obtain Medicare coverage. Ordinarily, Medicare premiums are deducted from payments of Social Security benefits, so those not receiving benefits must arrange for payment of the preiums. Application for Medicare coverage should be made at a Social Security office. It takes about three months before coverage goes into effect.

CRITIC AT LARGE

By Mac McDonald

Live or dead?

THERE'S GOOD news and bad news this week on the entertainment front.

First the good news, the Terry Hanck Soulrocker Review Part IV, "Blazing Guitars," blows into The Club of Monterey starting at 9:30 p.m. Thursday, May 17, and wait till you hear this lineup: in addition to Hanck's kickin' band, axemen Ken Arconti (who fronts his own excellent blues band, Blowtop Blues Band), Paris Slim, Ken Emerson, Tim Kaihatsu (from the Robert Cray Band), and Ron Thompson (of Ron Thompson & the Resistors). Thompson alone would be worth the price of admission ($5 at the door), the rest are icing on the cake. John "Broadway" Tucker of the Broadway Blues Band is also scheduled to sing, as he has in the first three reviews.

This showcase of R&B and blues has been getting better and better and this latest should be the best yet, but it may not even be enough to change the minds of those responsible for the bad news.

And the bad news? The Club will no longer present live music in its Thursday night slot, another crippling blow to the live music scene on the peninsula. Owner Brooke Lewis just got tired of losing money on Thursday nights, which he did on a regular basis, even for shows as apparently popular as Sheila E.'s recent appearance there.

Is the Monterey Peninsula washed up as a place to present live music? It seems so. This past Monday I went to see reggae stars Toots and the Maytals at The Catalyst in Santa Cruz. The place not only was packed, but most of the crowd stayed until the very end, which was pushing 1 a.m. In Monterey, there would be one-tenth the number of people and most of them would have high-tailed it home to bed by 11:30.

But there's still a few brave club owners and clubs that keep the dream alive: Doc Ricketts, Cancun, Monterey Bay Club, Monterey Brewing Co., to name just a few stalwarts. Of course, you'll never see any "name" recording stars appear there, but there's always a chance one of the many fine local bands that play these venues will break through on a national level.

The rest is up to you.

Estimates for the number of unwanted animals in the United States exceed 7.5 million. Many of these animals lead lives of misery, privation, disease and neglect. The others are spared this torture by being humanely destroyed by animal welfare agencies throughout the country. More than 70,000 puppies and kittens are born each day in America, compared to 10,000 people. That means that even if every man, woman and child in the United States were to adopt an animal there would still be an enormous surplus of animals. The easiest, most effective way to eliminate this tragic situation and the needless death of all these animals is to make sure they do not exist in the first place. PLEASE DON'T ALLOW YOUR ANIMAL TO BREED.

The Carmel Pine Cone and The SPCA of Monterey County along with the business people represented on this page present this animal feature. Visit the SPCA animal shelter, Monday thru Friday, 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., or Weekends 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call for holiday hours. 1002 Hwy. 68, 373-2631.

Please Note: Animals pictured are subject to prior adoption or return to owner. Adoptions to qualified homes only. If these animals have been adopted, there are other lovable dogs and cats available. Call 373-2631 for information.

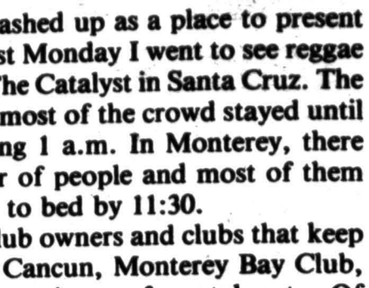
You don't have to be an American to die of a heart attack.



You also don't have to overeat. Or consume excessive amounts of cholesterol. Or ignore high blood pressure. Or smoke. But that's what a large segment of this country's population does. And that's one reason the United States has the highest incidence of heart attack in the world. At the American Heart Association, we're trying to help Americans change the way they live. And die.

PROTECTIVE GOGGLES, eyewear and often a respirator are worn by stone carver Kathleen Crocetti when she practices her art at her Pacific Grove studio. A 700-pound sculpture, her largest work to date, is currently exhibited in the galleries of the Carmel Art Association. Her work is also represented at Gallery One.

JAN WAGSTAFF developed her own technique of weaving cut canvas and applying layers of acrylic pigments to produce signature paintings. She is accompanied about her Carmel studio by her dog, Wag. For the second year running, Jan Wagstaff will participate in the Open Studio Tour. (Photos by Anne Papineau).

Open Studio Tour set this weekend

A splash of paint, a stash of stone...

By ANNE PAPINEAU

AN OPPORTUNITY for art lovers to step out of the gallery and into the studios where art is born returns with the second annual Open Studio Tour '90.

ARTS & LEISURE

From Corralitos to Big Sur, 66 artists will put out a welcome mat at the homes and studios where they ply their craft. Tour hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, May 19-20. Purchase of a $10 catalog admits two people for the entire weekend. And the catalog includes not only maps to the studios, but color photographs of the works of these creative locals.

Jan Wagstaff, a painter whose exhibits in San Francisco and New York City are sell-outs, came to Carmel 10 years ago with the thought of "staying for about six months."

To her surprise, "I found Carmel a very good working environment. I was here about four years when I had a brainstorm to design clothes."

Wagstaff's associates questioned why she would want to manufacture and market clothing from Carmel — far from the New York-Paris-Milan design centers.

"I said because it's a very peaceful environment to be creative in. I put the line together in about six weeks," she recalls.

These days Wagstaff devotes her Carmel studio entirely to her abstract acrylic paintings and pastels. Hers is a signature technique developed 15 years ago.

"I weave into the surface of the canvases with a translucent material to give them a layered effect," she observes. "First I paint the canvas, then I cut into the surface and weave the material in. I secure it in the back so it becomes solid again. Then I paint again to create a very thin layering of color."

Wagstaff's studio is housed in a garage adjacent to the Carmel home she shares with her husband. Living in Carmel, she has developed a work ritual. She is accompanied everywhere by her small dog, Wag.

"I got into a pattern of getting up at 4 or 5 a.m. Then I take Wag down to the beach — once or twice a day. I come back and keep myself immersed in work my whole waking time. This place (Carmel) is perfect for this kind of life — and I think that's why we (working artists) aren't too visible," she says.

Wagstaff uses her involvement in Open Studio, both this year and last, as a chance to break the isolation that characterizes her work days.

"People ask a variety of questions," she recalls. "For two days I have to talk about my work, and I discovered that people helped me find answers I never realized I had."

Jan Wagstaff's paintings can be viewed locally at the Christopher Grimes Gallery and at First Impressions, both in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

ON VALENTINE'S DAY this year Kathleen Crocetti discovered 10 tons of alabaster dumped on the front lawn of her Pacific Grove home/studio. Thank heavens she's a sculptor.

Crocetti's fiance, Abraham Hazbun, is a jeweler, and he arranged to have that surprisingly practical gift delivered on Feb. 14.

"He called a quarry, he hired a truck, and there it was," explains the artist, gesturing toward what she calls her "stash of stone." The mountain of alabaster now resides in a storeroom located off the studio they both share. For the second year, Crocetti will participate in Open Studio Tour.

"Pacific Grove is so full of artists. I like people to see what I'm doing," she notes. "It makes for good neighbor relations."

A self-described "Army brat," she toured the museums of Europe as a child. Crocetti began her artistic odyssey as a painter.

"My mom's a painter and I studied painting. Then I took a sculpture class and I called my mom and said, 'Mom, I'm not a painter anymore. I'm a sculptor.' "

Crocetti is something of a rarity in her field.

"I don't know any other female stone carvers. Most of my sculptor friends are males, and most are older."

In fact, Crocetti holds a part-time job finishing sculpture for another local stone carver. She maintains that her work brings her great pleasure.

"Every afternoon I'm in here and at least one day on the weekend. I get real grumpy if I don't work."

Crocetti's sculptures represent abstract, rather than representational forms.

"The figure has been done so well throughout history, so I choose to do these," she says.

At present her artist's eye is turned on a chunk of lapidolite, which is the matrix for tourmaline crystals. When sculpting, she wears a respirator, plus ear and eye protectors.

"I have pretty strong forearms," she adds.

One of her proud achievements is exhibited at the Carmel Art Association. At 700 pounds, it is the first of Crocetti's sculptures that is "too heavy for me to lift."

Her work is also shown locally at Gallery One in Big Sur.

LYNN LARSON is an artist on a roll.

Demand for her watercolors, and limited edition prints of her images, has expanded to the international level.

And if you don't already know her work, just check the July-August issue of U.S. Art. A Larson watercolor will grace the cover.

A Carmel Valley resident, Larson's growing reputation has not lessened her concern for quality.

"I finally found a printer in Southern California who does excellent work. I hasten to say these will be 350 signed and numbered, really limited, high-end limited editions," she explains.

Indeed, her paintings of flowers, at once fragile and rich, are translated into limited edition prints in Southern California, by way of Vienna, Austria. In Vienna, the fine lines of the paintings are captured with a gelatin process. A silkscreen print is then pulled in L.A.

"I'm very excited about it," Larson says.

Her Carmel Valley studio, which will be open to visitors this weekend, serves as headquarters for Chroma Editions. This is the company Larson formed with business partner Carol Donald to publish her paintings.

"We have created fine art poster images with international distribution. Japan, England, France, Canada, Germany, that's the beginning," she adds.

Both partners are also kept busy attending art expos coast to coast.

"You create visibility, notoriety and demand for your work," she notes. "We've been in Dallas, New Orleans, Boston, New York, Washington State. We'll complete the year in October with the Art Expo in L.A. It's our third year exhibiting there."

Larson looks forward to the time when she can devote a greater percentage of her energy to creating, rather than marketing her art. But her immediate goal is to build a "healthy, live, creative business."

Her Carmel Valley studio is nonetheless the site of some highly original endeavors.

"The monotypes are the latest departure from the watercolors," Larson explains, gesturing toward a colorful, swirling image of fish.

"They're spontaneous, created very quickly on a sheet of Plexiglass using lithography inks. They're applied with rollers, brayers and brushes, and I wipe into that surface the picture I want. Sometimes I use rags, my fingers, Q-tips, anything that acts like a tool to draw with," she says.

Larson calls these monotypes her "fleeting phenomena."

She describes Open Studio as "a wonderful exchange. I was very stimulated by the interest shown in my work last year."

Lynn Larson's paintings are exhibited locally at First Impressions in Carmel.

Open Studio Tour '90 catalogs, complete with maps to artists' studios, can be purchased at Center Stage Ticketing, 467 Alvarado St., Arts Division Office, Monterey Peninsula College, Monterey; the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Spanish Bay Gallery, Pacific Grove; Gallery One, Big Sur; Viewpoint and Christopher Grimes galleries, Carmel; and Valley Art Gallery, 1000 S. Main St., Salinas.

Open Studio Tour '90 is organized by Artists Equity and has received financial support from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, Cultural Council and the Monterey Peninsula College Art Department.

For additional information, call 375-1685 or 625-2573.

MONOPRINTS represent a new direction for Carmel Valley artist Lynn Larson. Her watercolors have already gained international recognition, and are exhibited in both Europe and Japan. Her flower bedecked studio will be open to visitors during both days of Open Studio Tour '90.

Jazz series kicks off at Cherry Hall

THE NICK WILLIAMS Quintet, whose repertoire ranges from traditional jazz to a haunting synthesis of blues and jazz ballads, will kick off a summer-long jazz series on Thursday, May 17 at the Cherry Foundation.

Titled "The Third Thursday Jazz Series," the five concerts will be held monthly through September and include a range of musical styles, instruments and guest composers.

Drawing from an array of sources and traditions, the Nick Williams Quintet creates a rich musical language grafted with spontaneous improvisations while performing original compositions as well as selections from Thelonious Monk, Horace Silver, Benny Golson and Charlie Parker.

The result is a mixture of jazz forms, suggesting an instrumental conspiracy between bebop, straight jazz arrangements and latin compositions.

Nick Williams has performed with jazz artists Anita O'Day, Carmen McRae, Claire Fisher and Lee Konitz. He has produced works for Flora Purlin, Joan Baez and Paul Anka.

The performance — which begins at 7 p.m. in Cherry Hall — is sponsored, in part, through a grant from the Monterey County Cultural Council. Tickets are $5 and reservations can be made by calling 624-7491.

The Cherry Foundation is located at the corners of Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel.

JAZZMAN Nick Williams will perform with his quintet during the summer-long Cherry Foundation jazz series opening at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 17.

Stroll the footpaths of Carmarthen Valley and soak up the special beauty and Welsh charm immortalized by the novel, How Green was My Valley.

In Robert Burns' country visit Dumfries, Ayr and the Tom O'Shanter Inn and enjoy the special cities of Edinburg, Loch Lomond, Inverness and Balmoral Castle.

From bed and breakfast establishments to world class hotels, from personal contact with the people of Wales and Scotland, this journey is one of scenic beauty and everyday adventure. By car, foot and bicycle, join Jim McDonald in experiencing Wales and Scotland.

MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin

Symphony closes season with varied program

THE CLOSING concert of the Monterey County Symphony conducted by Clark Suttle in King Hall of the Naval Postgraduate School was varied and flavorful. While it featured relatively young classical music, all written within the last hundred years or so, surprisingly there was a substantial difference in the scope and depth of the interpretation of the music.

Understandably, young musicians tend to be more in tune with the music of their times and this appeared to be the case in the course of this concert. Suttle's choice of an overture was the contemporary American composer William Bolcom's Commedia written in 1971 for the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra. Lightly scored and gently dissonant, it is an airy, fluffy satire centered on a Mahlerian lullaby, played by a string trio seated above and behind the orchestra. There are frequent rude interruptions from the larger group. These include a noisy Rossini tarantella tune with trick modulations and lots of composed wrong notes. The delivery was spirited.

Korean born and American trained violinist Young Uck Kim was a sterling soloist in the Prokofiev Violin Concerto No. 2 in G Minor, op. 63. The concerto was written in 1935 and received its American premiere in Boston with Jascha Heifetz as the soloist. It is a surprisingly romantic composition and the violinist has many fine-lined melodies to sing in the first two movements.

Kim and Suttle were very much in tune with each other and the playing was well coordinated throughout this by-no-means easy music. The solo part is strenuous and highly demanding in every aspect of the soloist's artistry. Kim made the most of the songful portions and shone in the flying fingerwork passages. The violinist is given very little chance to draw a breath or relax in the course of the work's three movements, but Kim was in excellent form all the way. The ferocious difficulties of his part obviously did not give him any trouble.

The orchestra (here too the scoring is light), were kept well in hand and acquited themselves neatly, particularly in the rather Mendelssohnian atmosphere Prokofiev created in the second movement with the solo line keeping up a running commentary above the orchestra. It was an elegant, sensitive interpretation.

The rather biting and satirical third movement has a rich blend of ironic rhythm and flashing melodic fragments. Soloist and orchestra were in full accord and brought the scintillating music to a successful conclusion.

The Brahms Symphony No. 4 in E Minor, op. 98, written in 1885, is still rooted in the Classical-Romantic era. Here Suttle and the orchestra missed the musical mark. The first movement was far more dramatic and emotive than the score would indicate and the tempo chosen left no time for the long-lined phrase to expand and be heard. The brass tone was harsh in the fortes and the strings were rough and unrefined.

This was true in the Andante which began well in the horns, but with its positive emphasis and speed, lost its essential character of noble introspection. Only when the lower strings had the melodic line was the tempo allowed to broaden and permit ruminative tenderness to come through.

The Scherzo was fast and strong, sounding like a brass band in spite of prominent string parts, and the Allegro finale was full of highly dramatic color emphasis. It moved briskly along at a speed which made difficulties for the orchestra and eliminated many of the finer moments of the score. The season ended brightly and brassily but not, in my view, as Brahms intended.

'Views from Alaska'

MAGGI SIRILO and Her Cameras* by James H. Barber is among the images that make up "Views from Alaska." Six photographers are featured in this show opening Saturday, May 19 at the Photographic Center of the Monterey Peninsula. JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

A shock

SUDDEN PASSING: Johnny Adams of KRML Radio (1410AM) will offer a one-hour tribute to the late jazz guitarist Emily Remler. Four o'clock on Friday afternoon (5/18). Her death while on tour in Australia — heart attack at age 32 — shocked her friends and fans here. Johnny obtained copies of the Australian press reports from Concord Records prexy Carl Jefferson, for whom Emily cut albums. These will help this column offer a fuller story next time.

•

ANY LIST of great drummers — Big Sid Catlett, Krupa, Papa Jo Jones, Kenny Clarke, Max Roach, Tony Williams, Jeff Hamilton — surely must include Ed Shaughnessy. His golden tubs have propelled The Tonight Show band since 1963. And all the honors heaped at his door by music publications might turn a lesser man's head.

Ed simply goes about his business with clarity and grace. Those qualities will be in evidence hereabouts on Saturday afternoon (5/19) and Sunday evening (5/20). The two events were put together through the work of percussionist Eric Tonn, Mission Ranch Barn's Steve and Marilyn Nergord, other prime movers behind Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra (MPJO). One at a time:

— At 1:30 Saturday, Ed will conduct a no-cost jazz clinic in the Brasstree Lounge of Doubletree Hotel. Seating allocations will honor school requests first...then the general public. There's still time for teachers to call Eric at 899-5919 or Education Director Bill Allison (372-5824). Tonn: "Ed believes so strongly in what we're doing that he offered his services completely free of charge and paid his own out-of-pocket expenses."

— Sunday evening's celebration at Monterey Conference Center kicks off with a six o'clock wine-tasting sponsored by Monterey Vineyards. Hors d'oeuvres from Marilyn and Steve's catering operation. An hour later, MPJO will open a Steinbeck Forum concert with "a set of new material and featuring Monterey Vocal Jazz Ensemble." Allison, Peggy Nesbitt Brown, Lee Durley, Lauri Hofer. Bright voices that mesh well.

Then Ed'll join the local orchestra for a full set of charts from his big band portfolio. This MPJO fund-raiser sets the ticket cost at $15 per. Public invited, of course. Anyone wishing to help students attend may use the above phone numbers. And instructors could pipe into the ongoing classroom program by contacting Bill.

Months ago, the MPJO non-profit design sounded like a happy dream. Dreams come true. (The orchestra continues on Monday nights at Mission Ranch Barn. Otherwise, the facility will host only private parties till possibly September.)

•

IT WAS my fun to take part in the first annual critics poll of JazzTimes. (Actually, jazz photographer Will Wallace and I got together over restaurant coffees and filled out a ballot together — since we usually take on assignments from the national publication as a team.) Results decorate the May issue. Available at Abinante Music in downtown Monterey.

Homegrown talent Ray Drummond scores as Best Emerging Bassist. The jazz musicians of last year? Dizzy Gillespie and Benny Carter. Pops Armstrong, Duke Ellington and Benny Carter become initial placements in the jazz journal's Hall of Fame. (We nominated Billie Holiday — maybe next time.)

Other interesting poll picks: Polygram (Best Jazz Label), Gunther Schuller's The Swing Era from Oxford University Press (Best Jazz Book), Phil Woods Quintet (Best Acoustic Combo), Bob Mintzer Big Band (Best Emerging), Carla Bley (Best Composer), Sonny Rollins (Top Tenorist), Christopher Hollyday (Best Emerging Alto Player), Trilok Gurtu (Best Emerging Percussionist), Joe Williams and Bobby McFerrin (tie — Best Male Singer), Betty Carter (Top Female Pipes). Many more winners — all noted by the current edition.

Hollyday's quartet will be at Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz on June 4 — and at Monterey Jazz Festival come September. Dizzy will spotlight the Cuban sound on Tuesday night (5/22) at Kimball's East in Emeryville — regular quintet plus master percussionist Francisco Aguabella. Diz too will play MJF this year.

ORGANIZERS of Watsonville's fourth annual Fats Waller Memorial Jazz Festival announce a "tentative lineup" and note that the latest gathering (June 23) also will be an earthquake recovery bash. And: "all talent will be donated; all profits will go toward a community performing arts building or leasing fund."

Jazz bands listed: Abalone Stompers, And That's Jazz, Beverly Hills Unlisted, Black Diamond, California Rhythm Kings, Devil Mountain, Elby Coy Little Big Band, Emperor Norton's, Hangtown Jazz Company, Scott Harris Big Band, High Society, Jubilee, Quail River, Professor Plum's, River City Stomperz, Silicon Gulch, Tuleburg, 20th Century, Volunteers of Dixieland Fire Brigade, Zenith.

Solo artists (in duets or ensembles as well): Bob Allen, Johnny Allen, Clyde Amsler, Tom Brozene, Chris Calabrese, Richard Cruz, Andrew Fielding, Bob Finch, Phil Gomez, Igor Glenn, John Hall, Mark Allen Jones, Ted Kohler, Sue Kroninger, Bud Lavin, Bob Phillips, Brian Richardson, Bob Smith, hopefully Norma Teagarden.

Noon till midnight. Tickets at $20 per may be ordered via 1-728-3948.

•

SIGHT BITES: Dexter Gordon told his family long ago he wanted to be cremated with the ashes scattered at sea. That's exactly what happened.

•The roster supplied by Monterey Jazz Festival said High School All-Star percussionist Mike Shannon was from Pacific Grove High. Carmel High music teacher Dick Robins and other callers point out that Mike's a student at Carmel High. Am happy t'make the correction.

•Pianist Ace Hill's gig at Doubletree Lobby Lounge has been extended through June. Thursday and Friday evenings (5:30-8:30); Saturday nights (7:30-11:30).

•When Bob Phillips and Terry Miller work out each week in Captain Hook Lounge (Monterey Beach Hotel), surprises abound. Superb on electric bass, Terry sat down at the piano a few nights ago and played beautifully behind vocalist Mary Macgregor on Maybe It Could Happen. Mary and Terry collaborated on writing the tender ballad.

The Phillips/Miller book brought forth a mesmerizing Chopin etude. Then reedman John Cortes sat in, borrowing pianist Bob's second instrument — the soprano saxophone. So: Chopin followed by swinging blues and uptempo standards.

•Supporting rich-voiced singer Kitty Margolis at the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club, piano master Dick Hindman said he'd just got back from Denver. It was a hotel gig and reunion with bassist Paul Warburton, who's on Dick's knockout trio album (Catero Records).

Guitarist John Stowell teams with pianist Smith Dobson at Monterey Bay Club on Thursday evening (5/17). Others: Spang-a-lang (5/18-19), Bob and Terry (5/20), vibist Rob Lautz and friends (5/21), Jack and Ed Show (5/22), Monterey Vocal Jazz Ensemble (5/23).

•MCI Telecommunications, sponsor of Monterey Jazz Festival, will make possible a jazz news show over KRML Radio. I'll write the copy. Start date to be announced.

•Kuumbwa offers the Ray Brown Trio with Gene Harris and Jeff Hamilton on Monday night (5/21). Shows at 7:30 and 9:30; $13 per; Center Stage Ticketing. These men outdistance even the most well-meant superlatives.

Framed

ED BRODERICK, owner of Tony's Frame Shop in Carmel, presents Hadley Osborn, president of Tor House Foundation for Poetry and Literature, with a framed rendering of Pulitzer Prize-winner Galway Kinnel's poem "First Song." Broderick donated this frame as well as a framed photograph of Kinnell taken at Tor House, the Carmel home of poet Robinson Jeffers. The poem is printed with hand-set type on hand-made paper. It was donated to Tor House by former Carmel resident Elisabeth Marshall, now of Menlo Park, and local resident Lequita Vance-Watkins. Kinnell had read his poetry at Tor House earlier this year. The framed poem will hang at the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation office space at Sunset Center. (Nancy Hills photo.)

Mammograms offered women in financial need

Applications for the Sherry Cockle Memorial Fund, a program offering free baseline mammograms to women in financial need, are now being distributed to doctors' offices, Planned Parenthood, the YWCA and selected churches.

The program, which went into effect March 1, offers a limited number of free, low-dose mammograms and an interpretation by a hospital radiologist.

It is being funded by a challenge grant from the Ueberroth Family Foundation and matching community donations. The initial grant was made in memory of Sherry Cockle.

Applications can also be obtained by calling the Patient Relations Department at Community Hospital, 625-4910.

After a woman returns the application, she will receive a call from a nurse at Community Hospital to complete the application process. If her application is accepted, she will be notified by Patient Relations.

Women whose mammograms reveal the need for follow-up care may be eligible for low-cost or no-cost treatment through the Sponsored Care Fund at Community Hospital.
